For this to happen, a website, a server or a client need to be registered, and be able to be contacted at a particular network or IP address. Create, edit and manage subscriptions The only information you need to provide is the site URL or the domain name. This is something you get as input during the registration process, so there are no fields to fill. You can easily view all your subscriptions, and you can cancel or delete a particular subscription as well as easily alter their periodicity. During the subscription process, you will be charged in real time, and can revoke a subscription at any time. Again, it is the responsibility of the creator to update the site or server automatically when the license expires. Step 1: Account Setup Enter your IP address and port number on the host machine; Step 2: Search the Website Step 3: New Subscription and Login Request SQP Postman has some excellent features such as the ability to check information from your website. This is especially useful when searching for the website status. If you notice it is down, it is definitely a good time to contact your web master to fix the problem.
