3 separate lines. Let's say you need to calculate the weight of a young girl who is approximately 50 cm tall and weighs 6 kg. To be honest, this is the way I usually solve the rule of 3. My first step is to read the value 50 cm in the first line and then looking up at the second line which stands for kg. Next to each number there's an arrow, which points down, letting me know that the number that's following is smaller than the current one. To be able to do that in this way, I will have to take the values from the first line to the third line by turning my head three times for a proper calculation. This application provides an alternate solution, a Rule of 3 Calculator that is easy to use and will save you this tedious and tiresome exercise. The application will display the line of 50 cm and 6 kg on the first line, and when you finish the calculation, you will see the amount of kG at the bottom. You don't need to turn your head anymore because the application will follow the same rules as your head for the conversion.
