Organochlorine pesticides and polychlorinated biphenyls in water and sediment from Lake Elizabeth, Bangladesh. Samples of water and sediment were collected from Lake Elizabeth in Bangladesh. Concentrations of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), HCHs (alpha, beta, gamma and delta), oxychlordane (oxychl) and DDTs (p,p'-DDE, p,p'-DDT and p,p'-DDD) were measured in the water and sediment using gas chromatography and analytical chemistry. DDTs, oxychlordane and HCHs were detected in the sediment while oxychlordane and HCHs were also found in the water. The profile of PCBs showed that they were almost exclusively present in the dry season. The pattern of the PCB congeners is quite similar to that reported from Bangladesh (Zelah, 1999), and indicates that lake sediments might be the major source of these contaminants. The ratio of HCHs to DDTs was found to be much higher in the sediment than in the water and to be higher in the dry season than in the wet season. The levels of DDTs in sediment and water in different seasons were found to be 0.030-0.230 mg kg(-1) and 0.031-0.824 microg l(-1), respectively. Comparison of p,p'-DDE to p,p'-DDT ratio from this study with that from previous studies in Bangladesh indicates that different biotransformation patterns might be involved in the two geographical regions.Q: Install multiple versions of Python on Mac I want to use anaconda on my MacBook Pro for data analysis, but it appears that I cannot install anaconda due to the fact that I currently use python 2.7 for data analysis scripts.
