Just Like A Bird is a game in which you fly like a bird through a beautiful and dynamic forest world. Your goal is to hunt, feed, evade and protect yourself from potential threats and predators while also enjoying your time in the world. In addition to hunting and a variety of scenarios such as crossing a river to visit a human settlement, you can fly in any direction using your wings. It is a game where you will need to decide when to attack and when to flee, all while learning the physics of bird flight. Your survival depends entirely on you. Features of the "Just Like A Bird: Flap and Angle" Flight Game Bird Flight Simulation Featuring a lifelike bird flight simulation with bird wings, real bird flight mechanics, and soaring flight physics. Procedural World An infinite world generated procedurally from a seed to save every game. Kill Speed Realistic and responsive kill speed. Angle Control Support for precise control of your bird flight. Spending Time on Your Terrain Explore the ground and hunt prey from the air. Unpredictable Flight A bird that makes erratic flight patterns will have a much more unpredictable flight experience. Tailoring Your Flight Skills After hundreds of hours of game play, your bird flight will become specific to your play style. World Exploration Dive into a huge and natural world. Personalization The game allows you to set your play style, color, kill speed, gravity, etc. It is highly personal, allowing you to tailor your bird flight experience. About Just Like A Bird: Flap and Angle is the latest in-depth game from Pixel Caper Studios. Pixel Caper Studios is an Indie Game Studio from Cyprus, led by developers, who want to create meaningful games that have a social impact. ----- Micro Cosmic Worlds is a journey into the worlds of the infinitesimally small. Using the power of virtual reality you become a voyeur as you explore the worlds of the sub-microscopic. Filled with puzzles, action, and intriguing historical lore, the player is provided an experience for which they are entirely unable to comprehend the magnitude of. Through education you are introduced to previously unimaginable technology such as magnetism and light's unique path through nearly transparent space. With strong cross-platform compatibility in mind, Micro Cosmic Worlds supports both Oculus Rift and HTC Vive. Special thanks to the National Science Foundation and NVIDIA for supporting this project as a part of their Summer of Code. For more information on being a Citizen Scientist for an NSF Summer of Code: Game Features: ----- - Exploration of the fundamental building blocks of life using the power of VR. - Discover how magnetism, light, electricity, and nearly infinite parallel pathways work on a microscopic scale. - Learn about the unique properties of materials at the atomic scale such as Graphene and the exciting opportunities that are emerging from the development of the atomic age of nanotechnology. - Explore the realm of nano-technology and how our already developed technology (e.g. the iPhone) has already been used to create innovations in the realm of the atomic world. - Interaction through intuitive hand-sensitivity controls to indicate various interaction events in the world (e.g. jumping, turning, pushing). - Minimalist and highly interactive worlds. - Integration into education. ----- Game Design Inspiration and Design Goals: ----- This is a science based virtual reality (VR) experience designed for the unimaginably small, with a focus on the unusual properties of the microcosmos. Our design goals centered around giving the user the best experience possible for learning about a wide range of natural phenomenon at the atomic scale. At the same time, we wanted to be able to use a modern technology platform (i.e. an HTML5 based Unity3D engine) in order to maximise compatibility with future iterations of hardware and software, as well as be highly accessible to the public. & Keepers trailer Related Media Just what you expect from a by-the-numbers production based on a video game — such as a Disney animated feature based on a new Disney hero, created by a 22-year-old film director from Kansas, who is kicking Disney's butts? Guess again. The Kubrick of Video Games is one of the least likely megastars to come out of gaming, but that's because he's the real deal: Motion Picture Academy Awards nominee Gore Verbinski, the author of two bestselling books on filmmaking

(and with one movie under his belt, "The Ring"), and producer of a hugely successful video game. He's also the first director to use the word "caveman" in a trailer for a live-action, theatrical feature film. Produced by Verbinski and Ed Kitsis, along with Ridley and Tony Scott, "Caveman" has received critical acclaim and a strong $35 million opening weekend. It will hope for a profit when it hits theaters on Friday. As for Verbinski, he's a guy who prefers being called a "filmmaker" rather than a "game director." But, with his mop-top hair, tailored suits, boyish manner and comedy chops, he looks and acts more like a filmmaker than anything else he does. "I think of myself as such a kid. I can still wait in line for the newest Xbox in my games store," Verbinski said. "I'm still a kid. I'm just kind of well-heeled and in demand." His visual style, both on television and in "Enchanted," could be called "cubic" and frequently veers toward comic absurdity. "If I'm called to concentrate on drama, I'll do it. If I'm called to do action and adventure, I'll do it," Verbinski said. "I like doing it all. I like playing with music. But I like the other more. I enjoy doing fantastic concepts." "Those types of qualities, it's good to have them in a director. You don't have to have all of them. But I don't have a particular director type." Saving bottles up for a party Born in Zebulon, Ga., in 1973, Verbinski was raised by a single mother who wanted to be a chef but had the talent of a Navy wife. After earning degrees in film directing and

In Disc Golf by Playing Discs you control a disc throwing a basket which is attached to a spring. The disc moves forward or backward on its own and bounces when it hits an obstacle. Your task is to throw your disc and steer it towards the basket. You will have to plan your route carefully, navigate challenging terrain and use your limited booster ability sparingly. You are encouraged to use all five of your discs to increase your score. Your goal in each of the 18 hole courses is to advance towards the "Flag". In Stroke Play and Match Play you need to reach the Flag before your opponent. In Speed Play and Speed Match Play you need to get to the Flag as fast as possible. Disc golf by Playing Discs is designed for a solo player or for two players to compete against each other. You are required to have the same discs in the game on both computers. Every shot counts. Every throw will affect your score. You will be rewarded for successfully throwing your disc to the basket. Give yourself the slightest advantage with a slightly lower drive or on a slightly more challenging hole. The wind will make your life difficult. You will have to adapt to it and plan ahead accordingly. You will need to memorize the wind profile of each hole. If you think that it will be too windy, use the disc boosting option before you take the shot. In Stroke Play and Match Play you can only enhance your disc's carrying capacity, in Speed Play and Speed Match Play you can use your disc boosting ability.
