penicillin discovered in 1952 by Arnold Rosenberg at Pfizer. Biaxin has shown efficacy in acute and chronic tonsillitis. While this is the indication for which it is prescribed, it has also been used for topical and inhalation treatment of bronchial infections, acute and chronic bronchitis, sinusitis, bronchopneumonia, exacerbations of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, pneumonia, bacterial and tuberculous meningitis, and bronchopleural fistulae. It is also used for treatment of urinary tract infections and as an alternative treatment for candidiasis and mycosis in severe or recurrent urinary tract infections. It is applied topically for the treatment of acne vulgaris. Route Biaxin is administered orally, intramuscularly, and intravenously. Dosage varies with the dosage form and on the condition being treated. Oral administration results in an average peak plasma concentration of less than 20 mg/L (less than 1 µg/mL) and a trough level of greater than 100 mg/L (5 µg/mL), and an intramus
