A: I know this is an old question, but I just spent 20 minutes scratching my head trying to figure this out. You can download a serial key from this website, and use it to register your product. Q: When Should "Number of datapoints in a week" be Constant? In R, I'm dealing with the following data week | data 1: 1-1-2014 | 48.2289 2: 1-2-2014 | 49.8495 3: 1-3-2014 | 49.6182 4: 1-4-2014 | 46.2708 5: 1-5-2014 | 46.5311 6: 1-6-2014 | 46.7013 When should the "Number of datapoints in a week" variable be a constant? It shows in both my CRS and UNIT and also when I'd like to incorporate my variable into some other model as a variable, so I need to make it something constant. A: Assuming the data is correct, the best way to deal with it might be to treat it as you would any other factor. Let's say there are two alternatives: either treatment B has a different effect on week, or the effect is the same throughout, but week is measured differently. Then the best solution is to use a model like: mod2
