When you do need to overclock, you'll need to program the card to be as close to the voltage it will receive while recording. A little planning will avoid any issues. Aside from all of these new features, elements are still present in Photoshop. The Mac version of Photoshop now has a hardware system requirements page. It's designed to help you decide if you have the hardware to use Photoshop to its fullest. Some of the specs may seem EXTREME, but if you're not having any issues, your machine should be able to run Photoshop.
