I think we should show that a function on W can be extended to X^3 . But I am not sure about how to do it. A: Use the open mapping theorem. A: Let $X = \mathbb{R}$, let $A = \{(0,0,0)\} \cup \{(a,a,a) : a \in \mathbb{Q}_+\} \subseteq \mathbb{R}^3$. Prove that A is dense in \mathbb{R}^3 . The nuclei of the vertebrate olfactory sensory neurons (OSNs) are activated by the odorant molecule. Each OSN expresses a single receptor type, with the same anatomic location and neuronal functions. However, the temporal relationship between the formation of OSN and the temporal activity pattern of the OSN in response to odorants is diverse. Thus far, the molecular mechanisms that regulate the formation of OSNs are poorly understood. In order to establish OSNs in an odorant dependent manner, OSNs must integrate the environmental signals that govern the development of the olfactory system. In the proposed study, we will investigate the molecular mechanisms and functions that regulate the formation of OSNs. We propose to examine the hypothesis that OSNs are regulated by distinct sets of genes, and that by regulating the expression of such genes OSNs sense the environmental signals that establish the balance of OSN and interneuron. Specifically, we will: i) Examine
