Adobe has just made Speed Clippings on mobile devices easier to use. You can place a Speed Clipping on the right side of the screen while you work. Saves your last position and project state to be used as a template for new projects. Speed Clippings can be excluded from the workspace, too. Novice users no longer have to worry about the steps involved in saturating or desaturating a photo. It's as easy as the new one-click choice in Photoshop. Clicking the Eye Dropper (located next to the health slider on the history panel) and selecting a color brings up its spectrum, with the sample color in the color panel. You can adjust the saturation and lightness to make the scene more or less bright. Those with repetitive tasks will like having the option to create a Custom Panel in the right window. Use the Address Book widget to populate it, and click the plus sign on the panel to access the widget and create new panels. Introduction to Web Design: With the release of Photoshop CC on the web, it's easier than ever to improve and refine web designs and get them live in no time. Whether you're an expert or beginner, this course will outline the features and techniques of the newest web design technology available to you right now. Once you've learned the ins and outs of web-safe images, CSS layout, and responsive design, you'll be in a position to design, code, and deploy your own web pages for a fee. New lighting and paint color: When working with an image that's shot on location or one that was manipulated using Photoshop, it's often important to recover the color and overall tone of the original shot. In other words, you may want to return the overall imagery to how it appeared when it first was taken. The Internet Color Settings feature in the CC version of Photoshop allows you to select the color you want to recover from your image. It's easy to think of Photoshop as just a "black and white" replacement for raw photos, but one of the most interesting features is the ability to edit color in an image. You can even adjust colors of objects within the frame, so you can manipulate the colors of people or landscapes without affecting the background.
